

BILL LAMB

B.A., M.A., Ph.D.

Vice President, Academic Affairs

Kirkwood Community College

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, USA

Facilitator Since: 1994

Foundation Academy Graduate: Arizona 1993-1994

Advanced Academy Graduate: Alberta 2009-2010

Editorial Board

Bill Lamb has served as the Chief Academic Officer at Kirkwood Community College since 2007. Prior to his move to Iowa, Bill had spent his educational career in Kansas, most recently as the Dean of Liberal Arts and Distance Learning at Johnson County Community College in Overland Park, KS. During his time at JCCC, Bill held several positions, including: assistant dean, department chair, and writing teacher. He received his PhD in Curriculum and Instruction from Kansas State University in 1984 with an emphasis in composition and rhetoric as well as community college education. His Master of Arts degree in English literature is from Pittsburg State University, and his Bachelor of Arts degree in English is from the University of Kansas. He grew up in a small, rural town in Kansas and attended his first year of college at the local community college - a wonderful start to his higher education career.

Dr. Lamb has received numerous awards including the Paul Elsner International Excellence in Leadership Award in 2011. He is active in his local Rotary club and several community organizations, and he serves on the Executive Board for IAWIND, a statewide organization focused on supporting the growth of renewable energies throughout the world. Additionally, he is a member of the Leadership Editorial Board and the secretary for the Oak Creek Homes Association. He recently joined the IDEA Advisory Board. Dr. Lamb also has a number of publications and is a frequent presenter at international and regional conferences and workshops. His family serves as his life focus, and they share in his love of nature and outdoor activities.